Craig Shofed

UNITED STATES

C.a. Shofed moved to Trenton, New Jersey and found the art scene in my new hometown was raw, vibrant and easy to access. A few years into his move Shofed had his second kidney transplant. During his recovery he made the decision to become a full-time artist. In 2012 Shofed had his first solo exhibit. Creating pieces for that exhibit set Shofed on a course where his style was being described as “painterly”.

He found that he was being influenced by painters such as John M. W. Turner or Maurice Prendergast. “To this day “Burning Houses of Parliament” by Turner amazes me every time I see it!” Shofed’s style changed and shifted as he became more comfortable with his technique, his camera was his paintbrush, and he was a contemporary artist not confined by the art world’s definition of what photography should be. He was more comfortable telling the story he saw through his lens and less concerned about the exact technical aspect of photography.

In 2017 Shofed embarked on his journey into more abstract work with the creation of his Reflectionism series. He continues to twist and challenge himself with artist collaborations and his Puddle Architecture work. C.a. Shofed’s art has been exhibited and sold in galleries and museums across the globe including Philadelphia, New York, San Diego, London, Glasgow and many places within the continental United States and Europe.

In Berlin (1994–2000) he studied acting and dance theater, gaining awareness of the expressive potential of the body in the visual arts, in particular in photography, where technique gives way to research, understood as a communication through images of a state of mind, contingent and unrepeatable.

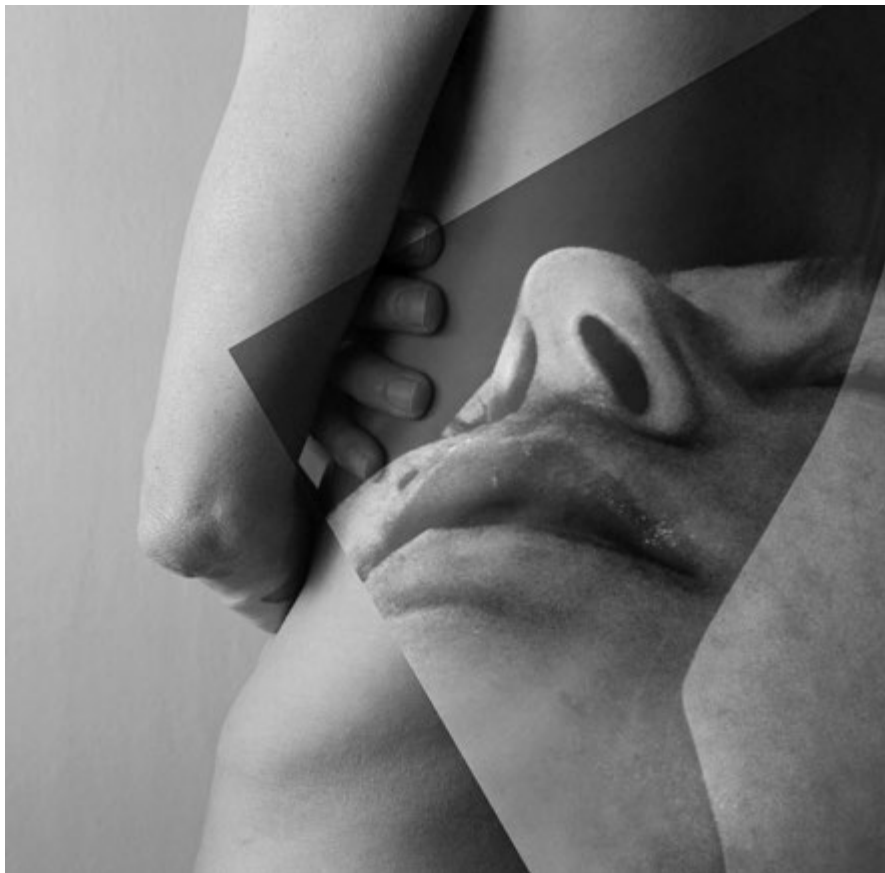

She currently deals with photographic projects that do not exclude contamination with other disciplines such as sculpture, painting and installation.

Fotini Ioannidi

GREECE

My Name is Fotini Ioannidi and I am based at the city of Athens in Greece. I am a Street and Still life photographer and my work has been inspired by the city I have grown up and lived in. Athen's architecture reflects past and modern influences, combinations of different lines, shapes and textures are commonly seen in the city and the beauty of this mixture has been inspiring my work.

Athens is a very busy town and capturing images of people with the use of the amazing architecture enables me to create a picture that not only enlightens the sheer beauty of the architecture but it can be also used as a reflection of my view on the current society. For instance, in this picture "The Man", the harmony between the different lines, shapes colours and objects have created a powerful picture of a man who even though he is at a very busy city, at this photo at this moment he is in a perfect harmony with his surrounding, creating the illusion that time is standing still. And this is the message I want to spread that even though we live in fast paced societies, the beauty of living is found in small and simple things and it is wonderful when you take the time to slow down and cherish them.
